Fund manager commentary 30 June 2019

Most stockmarkets around the world made further gains in the second quarter of 2019, rounding off a solid start to the first half of the year. This was despite a significant wobble in May, when renewed trade war concerns after President Trump escalated disputes with China and Mexico spooked investors, who then sought safety in core government bonds.

UK stockmarkets rose during the second quarter, with rallies in April and June overcoming marked weakness in May. US stockmarkets were volatile during the second quarter, although they rose overall. European stockmarkets ended the period in positive territory. The Japanese stockmarket was one of the weaker performers globally in the second quarter, this was partly due to a sharp rise in the yen, which benefited from its status as a safe haven currency. Asia Pacific ex Japan was turbulent over the period.

UK commercial property recorded a small positive total return. However, the overall positive return masks a divergence between Offices and Industrial (where capital values have increased every month so far this year) and Retail (where capital values are falling). UK government bonds (gilts) delivered further positive returns in the second quarter of 2019 as the prospect of renewed stimulus from the world’s central banks provided a supportive backdrop. During the second quarter, global bond markets generally delivered positive returns, helped by solid performance in the final month of the period.

The M&G Treasury & investment Office (T&IO) outlook remains constructive although global economic growth slowed in 2018 and is likely to continue doing so in 2019.
